THE FACTS TOLD

Harrodsburg, Ky.—The Kentucky Republican in its current issue, publishes a lengthy editorial reply to the criticism of the financial policy of the present Republican administration, and its predecessors under Bradley and Taylor, made by former Gov. Beckham, editor of the Kentucky State Journal.

The controversy began by the publication in the Republican of an article approving the conduct of affairs under Gov. Willson, and referring particularly to the economy and wisdom that had been practiced in the expenditure of the public revenues. Mr. Beckham, in a later issue of his paper, took occasion to point out what he alleged to be flaws in the Republican's argument, and reverted to ancient history in order to demonstrate to his own satisfaction that the virtue of economy lay wholly with the Democrats.

BECKHAM'S ADROIT EVASION.
Mr. Beckham accepted the statement of the Harrodsburg editor, in which figures were quoted from the report of Auditor Stone, who held office under Bradley, to show that the end of his regime he left in the treasury to pay the bonded indebtedness of the State, the balance amounting to $1,060,425.08, but to the charge made by the Republican two months later the Democratic auditor found a net indebtedness of $1,700,000, and that this indicated extraordinary extravagance in a brief space of time on the part of the new Beckham administration, he replied with the counter charge that Auditor Stone turned over the balance from his administration, not to the Democratic treasurer, but to the Republican official who served during the few weeks of the ill-fated Taylor regime.

The inference, while not directly drawn by Mr. Beckham, appears to be that the leakage occurred in this brief interval between Bradley and himself.

THE REPUBLICAN'S ANSWER.
In order to meet this adroit shifting of responsibility the Harrodsburg editor, alleging that he omitted reference to the Taylor regime in his original article for the purpose of drawing out Mr. Beckham, shows that Auditor Colter, who was Gov. Beckham's colleague, in a report to the Legislature dated December 1, 1901, was able to discover only one item for criticism in the accounts of the Taylor administration, that being the expenditure of $29,926.13 for the maintenance of the State militia at Frankfort during the critical period in which the conflict for office was proceeding. This expenditure Mr. Colter referred to as a misappropriation.

The Republican editor argues that since Auditor Colter was naturally prejudiced against the Taylor regime, the fact that his critical scrutiny could find no other item for condemnation than this is high tribute to the honesty with which affairs were conducted in the three troubled months of Republican rule.

DEMOCRATIC EXTRAVAGANCE.
Quoting from Colter's report again, the Harrodsburg man shows that on the former's own admission $364,771.37 was turned over by W. R. Day, Treasurer under Taylor, to S. W. Hager, Treas. under Beckham. In spite of the fact that the Beckham administration collected $1,323,000 from the Federal Government, and mulcted the people for $1,000,000 more in taxes every year than they had ever been required to pay before, within two months a deficit of $1,700,000 had appeared, and when the Democrats went out of office in 1907, according to the Republican, they left the treasury practically empty.

The Republican follows this argument with an itemized statement from official sources of all expenditures during the Taylor administration. This statement is lengthy, and includes reference to the statutory authority for each item. The largest single entry, more than one-third of the total amount, is $332,355.51 for school claims.

Mr. Beckham is challenged to show from these figures where extravagance or dishonesty existed in the Republican conduct of affairs, as charged by inference in his paper.

QUESTIONS FOR BECKHAM.
Further the Harrodsburg editor challenges Mr. Beckham to tell why it cost him nearly a million dollars more annually to administer the State than it cost his predecessors. He invites him to dispute the charge that the Democrats left indebtedness amounting to $900,000 when they went out of office in 1907. He asks him to inform the public about how much of the State's money was spent in getting possession of the offices to which Taylor and his colleagues had been elected.

Referring to a quotation in Mr. Beckham's paper from a contemporary to the effect that Gov. Willson had Civilization is going like a race horse these days—covering more ground every year than it used to in a century. A man has to keep hustling all the time to keep up—if he wants his share of the benefits of progress he must catch hold and hang on tight. A newspaper is the connecting link that holds the progressive men of today in touch with the rest of the world.

EVERY DAY COUNTS.

Every thing that is worth while in this world has to be earned, and it is a mighty fine thing that the most valuable things are the ones that cost the most. This results in the fellows that will appreciate the best things getting them.

One of the best things on earth is an education, and it is one of the hardest things to get. For a good education can only be had by keeping right after it for years. It is hard to work steadily day after day and year after year, and yet that is the only way to accomplish anything.

In going forward it is much easier to keep going than it is to stop and rest and then start again. Once and a while every one has to rest, but the more seldom that is, the faster and further he will go. It is the same way with getting an education. The more persistently a boy sticks to his work the sooner he will begin to profit by it.

A single stop to rest costs a good deal. The rest of the class gets ahead, and it is harder to study when you get back to school, and there has been an actual day lost. Besides, and most important of all, when a boy stops out a few days he loses his motion—his momentum, and has to get started all over again. A day out of school pretty nearly loses a week's time for the boy.

It is mighty hard to stick to school these hot days, when the trees are so nice to lie under and apples taste so good. But that is the only way to do any good. Of course a fellow will go some even if he does stop once in a while, but he will be a long way from doing all he could, and he will be cheating himself for the rest of his life if he does not work hard right along. Every day of life counts, and every school day is an opportunity that should never be allowed to pass, for a boy can lay up riches for his whole life in it. Don't miss a day.

And parents, who know better than the children what is good for them, should see to it that the youngsters don't miss. The parent who lets his boy loaf, or stay from school to work, is injuring that child for life.

WHAT IS MONEY WORTH?

When a man in a high place brays, it makes quite a stir. Therefore it is not surprising that several people took notice of the following bit of talk to a graduating class at Dartmouth, from Prof. G. H. Palmer, of Harvard:—

"You have had little to do with self-support. Now you are called upon to earn your own living. From this time on honor money—getting money and power. Riches are the lever of service to the world."

It would not be surprising to hear talk like this from some people. There are always, and probably always be, people who can never see beyond the shine of the silver dollar, and who never ask either where the money came from, or where it is going. There are some people so low that they measure all success by the dollar mark, and count the rich thief happier than the honest poor man.

But that such a view should be expressed by such a man, has surprised the world. Prof. Palmer knows about Harry Thaw—with lots of money, and about the paled faced, weak lived children of the city millionaires, who squandered in dissipation the money their fathers earned or stole, he knows of the wealthy scoundrels who are living in luxury on money stolen a few pennies at a time from the poor of the land thru trust extortions and corporation robbery; he knows of the rich brokers who cheat the poor who trust them; of the lawyers who betray the trusts of widows and orphans; of the saloon keepers who live richly on the proceeds of food and clothing which the wives and children of drunkards are forced to do without—Prof. Palmer knows all these things, and yet he says "honor money."

And Dr. Palmer knows of other things, too. He knows of the work done for suffering humanity by poverty stricken country doctors, of the self sacrificing lives of ministers of the Gospel, some of them giving their health and happiness for humanity in foreign lands, he knows of the work done by men like Burbank, Wright, Roosevelt, Bryan, Edison, Stevenson, and hundreds of others, who never sought reward in money, but lived and died with little wealth, yet won undying fame; he knows of the records of Grant, and Lincoln and Washington and Lee and Sheridan and Farragut and Dewey, he knows of the sermons of Talmadge, and Chapman and Finney and a hundred thousand others, and finally he knows of Him who had not where to lay His head—and yet he says "honor money." It may be that the time will come when Prof. Palmer's precept will be accepted and the world will honor money, but if ever that time comes, and the world has no honor for unselfish service, for heroism or patriotism or statesmanship or invention or the relieving of suffering or the preaching of truth, if that time ever comes we may all pray that Prof. Palmer may be left alone with the rich men he would honor so. There could be no worse punishment for him.

spent $160,000 for soldiers to suppress the night riders, and that there were other leaks in the Treasury, he requests Mr. Beckham to say whether he believes Gov. Willson was wrong in using the State militia for this purpose, and to specify just what are the "other leaks" mentioned in the quotation.—Louisville Herald.

INTERESTING FEATURES

This week we have the important article on sheep scab, advertised last week, and also another one of the series on Republican "mismanagement." Read them both. Next week there will be another article on scabies, and also one on the report of the Fire Marshall, showing how fires start, and what to do about it.

We will not be ready to start them next week, but we are getting ready to start two new features which will be of great value and interest. One will be a teachers exchange, where problems of the schools will be discussed, and questions answered. The other will be a new series of articles by Dr. Cowley, giving rules for health and good advice as to the best kind of foods. Every one will want to watch for these features—they will be better than anything of the kind that has ever been printed in any paper in Kentucky.

JACKSON COUNTY BANK

The Jackson County Bank, which was formerly a branch of the Berea Bank and Trust Co., has been re-organized, and severed connection with the Berea Bank and Trust Co., on July 1st. It has a capital stock of $12,000, divided into 150 shares of $100 each. The following officers were elected: R. M. Bradshaw, president; A. H. Williams, vice president; J. R. Hays, cashier. The directors are Messrs. R. M. Bradshaw, A. H. Williams, J. R. Hays, Isaac Messier, Dr. W. T. Amyx, Dr. J. D. Hays and D. G. Collier. The site, building, safe and all the office fixtures were purchased from the Berea Bank and Trust Co. The first month's business was very flattering for the young institution. There was an increase of more than $6,000 in deposits last month over its previous record. Under the management of such excellent gentlemen as its officers and directors, we predict a fast, sturdy growth of business until it takes its place among the lending county banks of the State.

NARROW ESCAPE

Miss Stella Anderson, little daughter of Ed Anderson, came near losing her life last Sunday afternoon in the swollen waters of Brushy Fork.

While returning from Sunday school in the West End, in attempting to walk the narrow foot-bridge in front of Mr. Tarleton Combs' home she became dizzy and fell. She clung to Nelly Combs' hand and caused her to totter, but by a swift run and jump Nelly gained the bank, but poor Stella was whirled away before the eyes of horrified relatives and friends in Mr. Combs' yard.

Mr. Combs and Mr. Rice both sprang in to her assistance and finally rescued her as she sank the third time. All were much exhausted, but in a short time were able to speak calmly of the incident which came so near ending the lives of all three.

LETTER FROM JUDGE WILSON

Berea, Ky., Aug. 14, '00.
To the Editor of The Citizen,
Dear Sir:—

I wish to say thru the columns of your paper that any and all tales being circulated over the country in regard to my taking a hand for the defense or the prosecution in the case against T. A. Malone are not true; more than that I held an inquest over the body of James Kinney, in accordance with my legal duty. Both parties were my friends, and my sympathy goes out to both families for it is a great trouble to all. So whoever tells any such tales only tells them to injure me in my race for magistrature.

Very respectfully yours,
J. S. Wilson, J. P.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens at Harvard where Col. Rupert Winter, U. S. A., visiting, saw the suicide of young Mercer. He met Cary Mercer, brother of the dead student. Three years later, in Chicago, in 1905, Col. Winter overheard Cary Mercer apparently planning to kidnap Archie, the colonel's ward, and to gain possession of Aunt Rebecca Winter's millions. A Miss Smith was mentioned apparently as a conspirator. A great financial magnate was aboard the train on which Col. Winter met his Aunt Rebecca, Miss Smith and Archie. Col. Winter learned that the financial magnate is Edwin S. Keatcham. Winter, aided by Archie, cleverly lured the hold-up on the train. He took a great liking to Miss Smith, despite her alleged kidnapping plot. Archie mysteriously disappeared in Frisco. Hired in a nearby room at the hotel caused fears for the boy's life. The lady's voice was heard over the telephone, however, and a minute later a woman's voice—that of Miss Smith. Col. Winter and a detective set out for the empty mansion owned by Arnold, a Harvard graduate. They were met with an explosion within. Mercer appeared. He assured Winter that Archie had returned. The colonel saw a vision of the supposedly haunted house. It was Miss Janet Smith, Col. Winter to himself admitted that he loved Miss Smith. Mercer told Winter that Archie had overheard plans for a coup and had been kidnapped. One of Mercer's friends on returning the boy to his aunt had been arrested for speeding and when he returned from the police station to his aunt the boy was gone. Mercer confessed he was forcibly detaining Keatcham. Mercer told his life story, relating how Keatcham and his secretary, Atkins, had ruined him, the blow killing his wife. Mercer was holding him prisoner in order that he could not get control of a railroad which was the pet project of the father of his college friend, Endicott Tracy. Aunt Rebecca saw Archie in a cab with two men. Then he vanished. She followed in an auto into the Chinese district and by the use of a mysterious Chinese jiao ornament she secured a promise from an influential Chinaman that the boy would be returned. Archie returned and told his story. Atkins, former secretary to Keatcham, being his second kidnaper. Col. Winter and Tracy returned to the "haunted house." They found Keatcham, apparently slain to death. Keatcham was not dead, however. Cary Mercer appeared on the scene. Winter, believing his actions suspicious, the party removed to the Arnold home. They feared Atkins' gang. The colonel became temporary secretary to the magnate. A Black Hand letter was received. The real characteristics of the great financier were revealed. The puzzle of the story fell into place, the blame for the crimes being lifted from Mercer's shoulders and placed upon Atkins. Love of Miss Smith and Col. Winter for each other was plainly seen by other members of the party.

"No," murmured Miss Smith meekly, with a little twinkle of her eye; "I did that; he hid them. How ridiculous of me to get in such a fright! But you know how Cary hated Mr. Keatcham; and you—no, you don't know the lengths that such a temperamental man will go. I did another silly thing; I found a dagger, one of those Moorish stilettos that hang in the library; it was lying in the doorway. When no one was looking I hid it and carried it off. I stuck it in one of the flower beds; I stuck it in the ferns; I have stuck that wretched thing all over this yard. I didn't dare carry it back and put it in the empty place with the others because some one might have noticed the place. And I didn't dare say anything to Cary; I was right miserable."

"So was I," said the colonel, "thinking you were trying to protect the murderer. But do you know what I had sense to do?"

"Go to Mrs. Winter? Oh, I wanted to!"

"Exactly; and do you know what that dead game sport said to me? She said she found those washed and ironed cuffs and trousers neatly cleaned with milk—what's milk?—and the milk cleaned the spots so much clearer than the rest that she had her own suspicions started. But says she: 'Not being a plumb idiot, I went straight to Cary and he told me the whole story—'"

"Which was like your story?"

"Very near. And you see it would be like Atkins to leave incriminating testimony round loose. That is, incriminating testimony against Mercer and Tracy. The dagger, Tracy remembers, was not in the library; it was in the patio. Right to hand. Atkins must have got in and found Mr. Keatcham on the floor in a faint. Whether he meant to make a bargain with him or to kill him, perhaps we shall never know; but when he saw him helpless before him he believed his chance was come to kill him and get the cipher key, removing his enemy and making his fortune at a blow, as the French say. Voilà tout!"

"Do you think—ber voce sank lower; she glanced over her shoulder—"do you reckon Atkins had anything to do with that train robbery? Was it a mere pretext to give a chance to murder Mr. Keatcham, fixing the blame on ordinary bandits?"

"Tty Jove! It might be."

"I don't suppose we shall ever know. But, Col. Winter, do you mind explaining to me just what Brother Cary's scheme with Mr. Keatcham was? Mrs. Winter told me you would."

"She told me," mused the colonel, "that you didn't know anything about this big game which has cost them millions. They've closed out their debts and have the cash. No paper profits for Auntie! She said that she would not risk her being mixed up in it; so kept you absolutely in the dark. I'm there, too. Didn't you know Mercer had kidnapped Archie?"

"No; I didn't know he was with Mr. Keatcham at the hotel. It would have saved me a heap of suffering; but she didn't dare let me know for fear, if anything should happen, I would be mixed up in it. It was out of kindness, Col. Winter, truly it was. Afterwards when she saw that I was worried she gave me hints that I need not worry, Archie was quite safe."

"And the note-paper?"

"I suppose she gave it to them," answered Miss Smith.

"And the voice I heard in the telephone?" He explained how firmly she had halted the conversation the time Archie would have reassured him. "You weren't there, of course?"

"No, I was downstairs in the ladies' entrance of the court in the hotel; I had come in a little while before, having carried an advertisement to the paper; I wonder why she—maybe it was to communicate with them without risking a letter."

"But how did your voice get into my phone?" he asked.

She looked puzzled only a second, then laughed as he had not heard her laugh in San Francisco—a natural, musical, merry peal, a girlish laugh that made his heart bound.

"Why, of course," said she, "it is so easy! There was a reporter who insisted on interviewing Mrs. Winter about her jewelry; and I was shooting him away. Somehow the wires must have crossed."

"Do you remember—this is very, very pretty, don't you think? Just like a puzzle falling into place. Do you remember coming here on the day Archie was returned?"

"I surely do; my head was swimming, for Mrs. Winter sent me and I began then to suspect. She told me Brother Cary was in danger; of course I wanted to do anything to help him; and I carried a note to him. I didn't go in, merely gave the note and saw him."

"I saw you."

"You? How?"

"Birdsall and I; we were here, in the patio; we, my dear Miss Janet, were the danger! You had on a brown-checked silk dress and you were holding a wire clipper in your hand."

"Yes, sir, I saw it on the grass and picked it up."

She laughed a little; but directly her cheeks reddened. "What must you have thought of me!" she murmured under her breath; and bit the lip that would have quivered.

"I should like to tell you—dear," he answered, "if you will—O Lord, forgive young men for living! If they are not all coming back to ask me to sing! But, Janet, dear, let me say it in Spanish—yes, yes if you really won't be bored; throw me that mandolin!"

Aunt Rebecca back in the armchair, faintly smiling, while the old, old words that thousands of lovers have thrilled with and hopes and dreams beyond their own power of speech and offered to their sweethearts, rose, winged by the eternal longing:

"Y al te mueve a lastima mi eterno pndecer.

Como te amo, amame, bellisssima mujer!

Como te amo, amame, bellisssima mujer!

"And what does it mean in English, Bertie?" said Mrs. McVillie.

"Can't you translate it?"

"Shall I?" said the colonel, his voice was careless enough, but not so the eyes which looked up at Janet Smith.

"Not to-night, please," said she. "I think Mr. Keatcham is expecting me to read to him a little. Good night. Thank you, Col. Winter."

She was on her feet as she spoke; and Winter did not try to detain her; he had held her hand; and he had felt its shy pressure and caught a fleeting, frightened, very beautiful glance. His dark face paled with the intensity of his emotion. Janet moved away, quietly and lightly, with no break in her composure; but as she passed Mrs. Winter she bent and kissed her. And when Archie would have run after her a delicate jeweled band was laid on his arm. "Not to-night, fiddle; I want you to help me down the steps."

With her hand on the boy's shoulder she came up to Rupert, and inclined her handsome head in Janet's direction. "I think, by rights, that kiss belonged to you, mon enfant," said she.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Casa Fuerte.

Winter would have said that he was too old a man to stay awake all night, when he had a normal temperature; yet he saw the stars come out and the stars fade on that fateful April night. He entered his room at the hour when midnight brushes the pale skirts of dawn and misguided cocks are vociferating their calisthenics to an indifferent world. Before he came there had been a long council with Mercer and his aunt, Mercer, who had been successful in his mission, had barely seen his chief for a moment before a gentle but imperious nurse ordered him away. Winter caught a queer, abrupt laugh from the financier. The latter heeded to him. "See you are as obedient as I am when your time comes," he chuckled; and he chuckled again when both the soldier and Miss

"I Should Like to Tell You—Dear," He Answered, "If You Will—"

Smith blushed over his awkward jocoseness. Yet, the next moment he extended his hand with his formal, other-generation courtesy and took Miss Janet's shapely, firm fingers in his own lean and nervous grasp. "Allow me to offer you both my sincere congratulations," began he, and batted his eyes, which seemed so inquisitive but were so keen, traveling from the woman's confusion to the man's. "I beg your pardon; I understood—Archie who was here, gave me to understand—and I heard you saying; you will hardly believe it, but years ago I sang that to my wife."

"So far as I am concerned, it is settled," said the colonel steadily.

Janet lifted her sweet eyes and sent one glance as fleeting and light as the flash of a bird's wing. "I—I—re-ckon it is settled," murmured she; but immediately she was the nurse again. "Mr. Keatcham, you are staying awake much too late. Here is Colvin, who will see to anything you want. Good night."

It was then that Mr. Keatcham had taken the colonel's breath away by kissing Janet's hand; after which he shook hands with the colonel with a strange new cordiality, and watched them both go away together with a look on his gaunt face unlike any known to Colvin.

Only three minutes in the hall, with the moon through the arched window; and his arm about her and the fragrance of her loosened hair against his cheek and her voice stirring his heartstrings with an exquisite pang. Only time for the immemorial questions of love: "Are you sure, dear, it is really I?" and "When did you first—?" To this last she had answered with her half-humorous, adorable little flit of a laugh: "Oh, I reckon it was—a little—all along, ever since I read about your saying that poor little Filipino boy, like Archie; the one who was your servant in Manila, and going hungry for him on the march and jumping into the rapids to save him—when you were lame, too—"

Here the colonel burst in with a groan: "Oh, that monstrous newspaper liar! The 'dear little Filipino boy' was a married man; and I didn't jump into the river to save him. It wasn't more than wading depth—I only swore at him for an idiot and told him to walk out when he tipped over his boat and was floundering about. And he did! He was the limit as a liar—"

To his relief, the most sensible as well as the most lovable woman in the world had burst into a delicious bit of laughter and returned: "Oh, well, you would have jumped in and saved him if the water had been deep; it wasn't your fault it was shallow!" And just at this point Mercer and Aunt Rebecca must needs come with a most unusual premonitory racket, and Janet had fled.

Afterward had come the council. All the coil had been unraveled. Birdsall appeared in person, as sleek, smiling and complacent over his blunders as ever. One of his first sentences was a declaration of trust in Miss Smith.

"I certainly went off at half-cock there," said he, amiably; "and just because she was so awful nice I felt obliged to suspect her; but I've got the real dog that killed the sheep this time; it's sure the real 'Red Wolf'!" It appeared that he had, of a verity, been usefully busy. He had secured the mechanic who had given Atkins a plan of the secret passages of Casa Fuerte. He had found the policeman who had arrested Tracy (he swore because he was going too fast) and the magistrate who had fined him; and not only that, he had captured the policeman, a genuine officer, not a criminal in disguise, who had been Atkins' instrument in kidnapping Archie. This man, whom Birdsall knew how to terrify completely, had confessed that it was purely by chance that Atkins had seen the boy, left outside in the motor car. Atkins, so he said, had pretended that the boy was a tool of some enemies of Keatcham's, whose secretary he was, trading, not for the only time, on his past position. In reality, Birdsall had come to believe Atkins knew that Keatcham was employing Mercer in his place.

"I can't absolutely put my finger on his information," said Birdsall; "but I suspect Mrs. McVillie Winter; I know she was talking to him, for one of my men saw her. The lady meant no harm, but she's one of the kind that is always slandering the detectives and being took in by the rascals."

He argued that Mrs. Winter and Miss Smith knew where the boy was; for some reason they had let him go and were pretending not to know where he was. "Ain't that so?" the detective appealed to Aunt Rebecca, who merely smiled, saying: "You're a wonder, Mr. Birdsall!" According to Birdsall's theory, Atkins was puzzled by Archie's part in the affair. But he believed could he find the boy's present hosts he would find Edwin Keatcham. It would not be the first time Keatcham had hidden himself, the better to spin his web for the trapping of his rivals. That Mercer was with his employer the ex-secretary had no manner of doubt, any more than he doubted that Mercer's scheme had been to oust him and to build his own fortunes on Atkins' ruin. He knew both Tracy and young Arnold very well by sight. When he couldn't frighten Archie into telling anything, probably he went back to his first plan of shadowing the Winter party at the Palace. He must have seen Tracy here. He penetrated his disguise. ("He's as sharp as the devil, I tell you, Colonel.") He either followed him himself or had him followed; and he heard about the telephone. ("Somebody harking in the next room, most likely.") Knowing Tracy's intimacy with Arnold, it was not hard for so clever and astute a mind as Atkins' to jump to the conclusion and test it in the nearest telephone book. ("At least that is how I figure it out, Colonel.") Birdsall had traced the clever mechanic who was interrogated by the eastern gentleman about to build; this man had given the lavish and inquisitive easterner a plan of the secret passages—to use in his own future residence. Whether Atkins went alone or in company to the Casa Fuerte the detective could only surmise. He couldn't tell whether his object would be mere blackmail, or robbery of the cipher, or assassination. Perhaps he found the insensible man in the patio and was tempted by the grisly opportunity; victim and weapon both absolutely to his hand; for it was established that the dagger had been shown Tracy by Mercer as a bribe, and left on the stone bench.

Perhaps he had not found the dagger, but had his own means to make an end of his enemy and his own terror. Birdsall believed that he had accomplished, or at least one accomplice, with him. He conceived that they had lain in ambush watching until they saw Kito go away. Then an entry had been made. "Most like," Birdsall concluded, "he just flung that dagger away for you folks to find and suspect the domestics, say Kito, 'cause he was away." But this was not all that Birdsall had to report. He had traced Atkins to the haunts of certain unsavory Italians; he had struck the trail, in fine. To be sure, it ran underground and was lost in the brick-walled and slimy-timbered cellars of Chinatown which harbored every sin and crime known to civilization or to savagery. What matter? By grace of his aunt's powerful friend they could track the wolves even through those noisome burrows.

"Yes," sighed the colonel, stretching out his arms, with a resonant breath of relief, "we're out of the maze; all we have to do now is to keep from being killed. Which isn't such a plain proposition in Frisco as in Massachusetts! But I reckon we can tackle it! And then—then, my darling, I shall dare be happy!"

He found himself leaning on his window sill and staring like a boy on the landscape, lost in the lovely hallucinations of moonlight. It was no scene that he knew. It was a vision of old Spain; and by and by from yonder turret the princess, with violets in her loosened hair and her soft cheek like satin and snow, would lean and look.

Y al te mueve a lastima mi eterno pndecer.

Como te amo, amame, bellisssima mujer!

"Ah, no, little girl," he muttered with a shake of the head. "I like it better to have you a plain, American gentlewoman, as Aunt Becky would say, who could send me to battle with a nice little quivery smile—sweet heart! Oh, I'm not good enough for you, my dear, my dear." He felt an immense humility as he contrasted his own lot with the loneliness of Keatcham and Mercer and the multitude of solitaires in the world, who had lost, or snider still, had never possessed, the divine dream that is the only reality of the soul. As such thoughts moved his heart, suddenly in the full tide of hope and thankfulness, it stood still, chilled, as if by the glimpse of an iceberg in summer seas. Yet how absurd; it was only that he had recalled his stolid aunt's most unexpected touch of superstition. Quite in jest he had asked her if she felt any presentiments or queer things in her bones to-night. He expected to be answered that Janet had driven every other anxiety out of her mind; and how was she to break it to Millie?—or with some such caustic repartee. Instead, she had replied testily: "Yes, I do, Bertie. I feel—horrid! I feel as if something out of the common awful were going to happen. It isn't exactly Atkins, either. Do you reckon it could be the Suey Whea, that bamboo-shoots mess we had for dinner?"

he gazed the motionless trees, live-oaks and olives and palms, were shaken by a mighty wind; the pepper plumes tossed and streamed and tangled like a banner; the great elms along the avenue bent over in a breaking strain. Yet the silken cord of the Holland window shade did not so much as swing. There was not a wing's breath of air. But gradually the earth and cloud vibrated with a strange grinding noise which has been described a hundred times, but never adequately; a sickening crepitation, as of the rocks in the hills scraping and splintering. Before the mind could question the sound, there succeeded an anarchy of uproar. In it was jumbled the crash of trees and buildings, the splintering crackle of glass, the boom of huge chimneys falling and of vast explosions, the hiss of steam, the hurling of timbers and bricks and masses of stone or sand, and the awful rush of frantic water escaping from engine or main.

"Quake, sure you're born!" said the colonel softly.

Now that his invisible peril was real, was upon him, his spirits leaped up to meet it. He looked coolly about him, noting in his single glance that the house was standing absolutely stanch, neither reeling nor shivering; and that the chimney just opposite his eye had not misplaced a brick. In the same instant he caught up his revolver and ran at his best pace from the room. The hall was firm under his hurrying feet. As he passed the great arched opening on the western balcony he saw an awful sight. Diagonally across from Casa Fuerte was the great house of the California magnate who did not worry his contractor with demands for colonial honesty of workmanship as well as colonial architecture. The stately mansion with its beautiful piazzas and delicate harmony of pillar and pediment, shone white and rocked on the eye for a second; then locked in ghastly wise and collapsed like a house of cards. Simultaneously a torrid flame streamed into the air. A awful din of human anguish pierced the inanimate tumult of wreck and crash.

"Rully for Casa Fuerte!" cried the soldier, who now was making a frenzied speed to the other side of the house, he cast a single glance toward the door which he knew belonged to Janet's room; and he thought of the boy, but he ran first to his old aunt. He didn't need to go the whole way. She came out of her door, Janet said Archie at her side. They were all perfectly calm, although in very tight and semi-oriental attire. Archie plainly had just plunged out of bed. His eyes were dancing with excitement.

"This house is a dandy, ain't it, Uncle Bertie?" he exclaimed. "Mr. Arnold told me all about the way his father built it; he said it wouldn't bat its eye for an earthquake. It didn't either; but that house opposite is just kindling-wood! Say! hero's Cousin Cary; and—look, Uncle Bertie, Mr. Keatcham has got up and he's all dressed. Hullo, Colvin! Don't be scared. It's only a 'quake!" Colvin grinned a sickly grin and stammered, "Yes, sir, quite so, sir." Not an earthquake could shake Colvin out of his manners.

"Are you able to do this, Mr. Keatcham?" young Arnold called breathlessly, plunging into the patio to which they had all instinctively gravitated. Keatcham laughed a short, grunting laugh. "Don't you understand, this is no 'little every-day 'quake! Look out! Is there a way you can look and not see a spout of flame? I've got to go downtown. Ars the machines all right?"

"We must find Randall; the poor soul has a mortal terror of 'quakes!" Aunt Rebecca's wellbred accents were unafraid; she appeared a thought startled, nothing more; danger always acted as tonic on Water nerves—"Archie, you got put your clothes on this minute, honey. And I suppose we ought to look up Milliecent."

Healthful Bath.

A bath much favored by the Kneippists, along with the bare-foot habit, is formed from a solution of pine needles and pine cones. Cover with cold water about a pound of fresh pine needles and pine cones, broken in small pieces. Boil for half an hour, strain and add the solution to the bath. If you do not want to use the entire amount at once it can be bottled and kept for future occasions. This has a tonic effect both on the nerves and the skin. It can be used on alternate days with a bath of sea salt.

Keep Your Eyes on the Ground.

In walking about the Australian gold fields it is always advisable to keep your eyes on the ground. You can never tell when you may kick up a nugget—or fall down a deserted shaft. From Terragula, a district that has been very prolific in valuable nuggets, comes news of a remarkable find. A man walking across the fields picked up what he thought was a mushroom. It proved to be a nugget and contained £50 worth of gold.

In Serge and Linen

SERGE Costume.—This costume is useful and smart in navy-blue serge. The bodice of skirt is wrapped and stitched on the right side; the jacket is semi-fitting, and is trimmed with black mohair braid of two widths, and hand-covered buttons; the collar is faced with silk. The fronts just meet, and are hooked on the bust, each side being trimmed with a silk ornament.

Black ermine hat.—Trimmed with white roses and green leaves. Materials required: Eight yards 48 inches wide, 5 yards saten for skirt lining, 5 1/4 yards silk for jacket lining, 1/4 yard silk for collar, about 8 yards wide braid, 25 buttons.

Linen Dress.—The skirt and over-bodice of this dress are in dark brown linen. The skirt is in a very smart shape, with panel effect front and back that is continued from the back into a deep waistband. The over-bodice is cut up in deep tabs that are buttoned to the waist-band, buttons also form a trimming at back and front. The under-bodice is of white cotton, spotted with brown. The yoke and sleeves are tucked; the high collar and wrists of sleeves are finished with pleated lace.

Hat of brown coarse straw.—Trimmed with shaded ostrich feathers. Materials required for the skirt and over-bodice: Six yards 42 inches wide, 13 buttons.

FASHION'S DECREE IN GLOVES

Models for All Occasions Are Displayed, and Most of Them Are Attractive.

Gloves especially adapted for tennis playing girls are of one button length in white or yellow chambray, a material which will not only withstand boiling but become softer and more flexible with every laundering.

The most practical gloves for golfing are the mousquetaires of colored mocha, which come with quite long wrists. For driving and riding there is nothing quite so smart as the white leather gloves with black buttons, stitching and gauntlets.

Tan, mode, white and black gloves for the street are of fine French glace kid in three and six button lengths and of finely spun silk, with double finger tips and composition clasp fastenings.

Young girls' summer party gloves are of white or delicately tinted twisted silk in elbow lengths. They are seamless, the thumbs hemstitched and some of them are exquisitely embroidered.

ELABORATE MILLINERY.

Hat of silver gray chip lined with black satin.—A long wreath of delicate silver roses shaded by a silver gray algrette mixed with marabou.

Slippers of Net.—A shoemaker, in his search for something new, has invented an evening slipper of Russian net over colored satin linings. The heels are colored to match. There is a jeweled buckle at the toe in any appropriate stones.

Cloth of gold slippers are in fashion for all gowns trimmed with gold lace, and some bronze slippers embroidered with beads cost as much as a gown.

There is also a fashion to have the top of boots made of bengaline and cravenette to match the gown.

The shoe absurdities will soon become as famous as the millinery ones.

Glove Mending.—To mend gloves properly, never use silk, as it cuts the kid. Select instead cotton the exact shade of the gloves and with a very fine needle buttonhole around the rip or tear; then catch together on the wrong side, taking one stitch at a time from one loop of the buttonhole stitch to another. When the rent is joined in this way it is scarcely perceptible and wears longer than if sewed through the glove.

SYRIAN WORK MUCH IN FAVOR

Popular Type of Embroidery That is Without Rival in Conventional Designs.

A type of embroidery that is especially adapted to conventional designs is the Syrian work, that gives an effect of overlapping scales. The designs which are stamped for this embroidery are divided into sections by lines running at regular intervals across the scrolls and other figures.

The method of working is both simple and rapid. The sections are filled in with a filling cotton and then worked in satin stitch following the growth of scroll. Three sides of section are then outlined so that the design when finished looks as if one scale sprang out of the other.

This is particularly effective for borders or table covers or sofa pillows or the centerpieces made of homespun linen used on tables between meals.

As the embroidery is done in Turkish floss or other heavy, glossy silk suitable for large designs, it works up quickly, yet has a handsome solid surface. There is room for infinite variety of shadings but it is well to keep the designs if possible in several tones of the same color. Thus a line of reds makes an attractive coloring or old blue Chinese greens and yellow verging to orange.

Care of the Skin.—When the skin is delicate and inclined to chafe from heat talcum powder may be used profusely. For this a big, soft puff is the best for the body and the dust should be thick enough to form a layer over the flesh. Several times a day and always after bathing, it must be put on. Any kind of powder answers the purpose—magnesia, French chalk, arrow root, etc. The point is to use enough. Cream of tartar water is as cooling as soda and is mixed in the same way. Sometimes only a combination of grease and powder will allay severe inflammation. For instance, carbolic vaseline, although it stings when first put on, is particularly good for such cases, being healing as well as soothing. Care must be taken to have the surface clean before it is applied and then powder in large quantity may be dusted on. Repeating these layers three or four times will make a paste that will adhere for many hours and is useful for the occasion when one is unable to renew the application.

Convenient.—If you will take a strip of hurlap, tleking or any stout goods, and tack it in the closet you will find it most convenient for planing skirts to. A piece a yard and a half long will be heavy enough to pin a half-dozen skirts to. Florists' pins are useful in attaching dresses to the strip or safety pins can be used.

Bottled Feathers.—The best way to keep plumes, especially nice ones, from one season to another is to place them in glass jars, fastening the cover securely. If white ones are put away in this manner sprinkle them with magnesia and when removed for use they will be light, clean and as fluffy as when new.

ASK $5,000,000,000 FUND

THAT SUM TO BE USED IN PUSHING IRRIGATION.

Other Resolutions Are Made at National Congress in Session at Spokane, Wash.

Spokane, Wash.—An issue of $5,000,000,000 in three per cent. bonds for irrigation of arid lands, improvement of waterways and public roads and drainage, is the plan of the National Irrigation congress in session here. Arthur Hooper of Spokane, secretary of the board of control, introduced the resolution requesting this great sum at Wednesday's session.

It is proposed to use this fund in five portions, as follows: One billion for drainage; one billion for irrigation; one billion for deep-waterways; one billion for good roads and one billion for forest preservation.

It was asked that a committee present the request to congress.

A resolution also was introduced planning that where settlers of arid lands have been deprived of the right to reclaim their lands by the action of the reclamation service in cutting off water rights such settlers may gain the right to their lands by the reclamation of one acre in their tracts by means of a well.

J. N. Teal of Oregon introduced a resolution condemning the use of the plumage of birds for the decoration of women's head-gear and asking further protection of birds in the west, where their activities are a relief from the savage insects in the forests.

George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey, spoke on the classification of public lands. Irrigation in South Dakota was discussed by S. H. Lea, state engineer of South Dakota. Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific railroad, spoke on the opportunities of the west.

Mr. Elliott, with a note of bitterness in his voice, said that while the railway is second only to the farmer as a developer of the nation's resources, "but few arose to say, 'well done, thou good and faithful servant'."

FRENCHMAN FLIES OVER ALPS

Reach Height Exceeding Three Miles While Passing over Mount Blanc—Danger Not Over.

Chamonix, France.—The balloon Sirius has succeeded in flying over the Alps. The airship left here last Sunday under the pilotage of M. Spelterine, who had with him three passengers. Fears were entertained for the safety of the voyagers, but they have landed safely at a point near Locarno at an altitude of 5,400 feet. The four men, however, still had a dangerous path to cover on foot from the place where they landed into Locarno.

The Sirius traversed Mount Blanc and soared over the Aiguille du Dru and the Aiguille Verte. The highest altitude attained on the voyage was 5,600 meters, equal to 18,373 feet.

A successful balloon trip over Mount Blanc and the Alps was made in November of 1906 by two Italian aeronauts in the balloon Milano. The greatest altitude reached on this trip was 20,500 feet, and the rarefied atmosphere made it necessary for the men to resort to their supply of oxygen to keep alive. The Milano, which went up from Milan, came down at Aix-les-Bains after having covered a distance of 175 miles in three hours.

ROBS ILLINOIS BANK OF $2,500

Lone Desperado Holds Up Cashier and Brother and Flees with Large Amount.

Jacksonville, Ill.—A daring bank robbery occurred at Franklin, Morgan county, a lone bandit securing $2,500 in currency from a cashier of the Farmers' & Merchants' bank.

One suspect has been arrested, but his identity has not been proven. Between one and two o'clock in the afternoon a man clad like a farmer appeared at the cashier's desk and asked to exchange some bills of small denominations for larger ones. The cashier went to the vault to get the bills.

When he emerged the robber was inside the railing and covered him with a revolver, demanding the banks cash.

SWEDEN'S STRIKE WEAKENS

Backbone of the Trouble Broken and Many Men Are Returning to Their Work.

Stockholm.—The belief is gaining ground that the backbone of the general strike has been broken. Workmen of various kinds resumed their duties in increasing numbers Wednesday and it is expected that the printers soon will return to work. All the newspapers in Stockholm are issuing hand-printed sheets while those in the south are being printed in Denmark.

Big Land Winning "a Lark."—Seattle, Wash.—Joseph Furry of Warsaw, Ind., who drew number 1 in the Flathead land distribution, is apparently not excited over his good fortune, although he has been informed that his allotment is worth $50,000. He registered for the drawings "just for a lark," he says.

Remove Ban on American Cattle.—Buenos Ayres.—The minister of agriculture has annulled the decree of 1905, prohibiting the importation into Argentina of American cattle.

Paul on Christian Love

Sunday School Lesson for August 29, 1909
Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—1 Cor. 13:1-13. Memory Verse 8.
GOLDEN TEXT.—"And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."—1 40, 12:13.
TIME.—The First Epistle to the Corinthians was written from Ephesus in the spring of A. D. 57.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.

1. Love Completes All Virtues, and Makes Perfect All the Good Things of Life.—Va. 1:3. First. Eloquence, uninspired by real love, not seeking the highest good of the hearer, is but "sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal;" mere noise without harmony, without meaning, without the soul of music. This is true even if we had the gift of tongues bestowed by the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

Second. Knowledge is powerless to build up character and the Christian life, unless it is guided and filled with love.

Third. Faith. 2. "And though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains," as promised in Matt. 17:20; 21:21, the mightiest and most enduring faith. One may have the most strenuous faith in the facts and doctrines of Christianity, without the faith that moves and touches the heart, faith that knows but does not obey. "And have not charity." He does not assert that one can have these things without love, but says if he could: "I am nothing." A moral cipher, without any moral worth or significance; weighed in the balance and found wanting.

Fourth. Almsgiving. 3. "And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor." As the Pharisees gave alms and Ananias sold his property from unworthy motives, without love; while Barnabas and many others sold theirs from love, and Jesus bade the rich young man do the same, as an expression of love and faith.

Fifth. Martyrdom. "And though I give my body to be burned." From unworthy motives, from pride, for a desire for honor or glory. There are persecuted upon whom Jesus pronounces his highest blessing (Matt. 5:10-12), but they are persecuted "for righteousness' sake." Yet even of these things, when done without love, it must be said, "It profiteth me nothing." There is no virtue in it to be rewarded. It does not improve the character nor aid the cause.

II. The Spectrum of Love. The Qualities Which Are Combined in Perfect Love.—Va. 4:7. The absolute importance of love, as an essential part of all virtues and actions, has been shown in the first three verses.

Our next duty is to learn what love is. Like life, love cannot be defined, but it can be described and recognized by what it does, by its fruits, by the expression of its qualities. It is like life. The greatest scientists cannot tell what it is in its essence, but only describe it by qualities and results.

First ingredient. Patience. 4. "Charity (love) suffereth long." Is patient with the faults and provocations of others, never weary of "well doing."

Second ingredient. Kindness. "And is kind." Kindness is love working, love in action, doing "as many kind things" to as many people as possible.

Third ingredient. Generosity. "Charity envieth not." Selfishness, the opposite of love, is the soil in which envy grows.

Fourth ingredient. Humility. "Charity vaunteth not itself." does not sound the praises of its own deeds, nor proclaim its virtues with a trumpet. "Is not puffed up." With self-conceit, as a soap bubble, large in size, but mostly wind.

Fifth ingredient. Courtesy. 5. "Doth not behave itself unseemly." Almost all unseemly conduct flows from pride and selfishness.

Sixth ingredient. Unselfishness. "Seeketh not her own." Is not looking out for self first of all. It seeks to give more than to receive.

Seventh ingredient. Good Temper. "Is not easily provoked." It does not lose its temper. The peculiarity of ill temper is that it is the vice of the virtuous. It is often the one blot on an otherwise noble character. No form of vice is more base; not worldliness, not greed of gold, not drunkenness itself, does more to un-Christianize society than evil temper.

Eighth ingredient. Guilelessness. "Thinketh no evil." Love puts the best construction upon the acts of others, instead of the worst, as many do.

Ninth ingredient. Sincerity. 6. "Rejoiceth not in iniquity." Is not glad when others sin, hates to report the weaknesses and faults of others, refuses to seem good by depreciating others. "Rejoiceth in the truth." Is in sympathy with all that is true, rejoiceth whenever it can find a virtue or good deed in others, joys in the triumph of virtue.

It "beareth all things." The Greek means to protect, as a shield protects a soldier.

Or the sides of a ship protect it against the rush of the "multitudinous seas," or wall and battlements bear all attacks of an invading army. It "believeeth all things;" has perfect confidence in God as the God of love. Its very nature is to hope. "Endureth all things." Goes on bearing, believing, and hoping to the end. The Immortal Three.—V. 13. "And now," in conclusion, "abideth faith, hope, charity." These three graces, faith, hope, love—remain imperishable and immortal. "But the greatest of these is charity." Love. I. It is greatest in its nature.

Expenses, Regulations, Opening Days.

Berea College is not a money-making institution. All the money received from students is paid out for their benefit, and the School expends on an average upon each student about fifty dollars a year more than he pays in. This great deficit is made up by the gifts of Christian and patriotic people who are supporting Berea in order that it may train young men and women for lives of usefulness.

OUR SCHOOL IS LIKE A FAMILY, with careful regulations to protect the character and reputation of the young people. Our students come from the best families and are earnest to do well and improve. For any who may be sick the College provides doctor and nurse without extra charge.

All except those with parents in Berea live in College buildings, and assist in work of boarding hall, farm and shops, receiving valuable training, and getting pay according to the value of their labor. Except in winter it is expected that all will have a chance to earn as much as 35 cents a week. Some who need to earn more may, by writing to the Secretary before coming, secure extra employment so as to earn from 50 cents to one dollar a week.

PERSONAL EXPENSES for clothing, laundry, postage, books, etc., vary with different people. Berea favors plain clothing. Our climate is the best, but as students must attend classes regardless of the weather, warm wraps and underclothing, umbrellas and overshoes, are necessary. The Co-operative Store furnishes books, toilet articles, work uniforms, umbrellas and other necessary articles at cost.

LIVING EXPENSES are really below cost. The College asks no rent for the fine buildings in which students live, charging only enough room rent to pay for cleaning, repairs, fuel, lights, and washing of bedding and towels. For table board, without coffee or extras, $1.35 a week in the fall, and $1.50 in winter. For room, furnished, fuel, lights, washing of bedding, 40 cents a week in fall and spring, 50 cents in winter.

SCHOOL FEES are two. First a "Dollar Deposit," as guarantee for return of room key, library books, etc. This is paid but once, and is returned when the student departs.

Second an "Incidental Fee" to help on expenses for care of school buildings, hospital library, etc. (Students pay nothing for tuition or services of teachers—all our instruction is a free gift). The Incidental Fee for most students is $5.00 a term, $6 in courses with Latin, and $7.00 in Collegiate courses.

PAYMENT MUST BE IN ADVANCE, incidental fee and room rent by the term, board by the half term. Installments are as follows:

FALL—14 weeks, $29.50,—in one payment, $29.00.
Installment plan: first day $21.05, (including $1.00 deposit), middle of term, $9.45.

WINTER—12 weeks, $29.00,—in one payment, $28.50.

THE SCHOOL

PLAYTIME IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The Educational Value of Play.

By J. W. DINSMORE

BASEBALL ONLY A TYPE.

It must not be assumed from the foregoing that baseball is the only game. It is used here because it is a typical American game, perhaps the most universal of school sports and shows well the educational value of play. There are games that are better for the cultivation of patience, courtesy, grace and other social qualities. In every school there should be a variety of games to suit all conditions such as age, sex, temperament, mental and physical ability and weather.

DOES THE COUNTRY CHILD NEED PLAY?

We sometimes hear the idea advanced that country children do not need play, they get enough exercise from their work and in walking to and from school. This thought is based upon the wrong assumption that play is only for physical exercise. Were this the case the country children would still need play. The farm boy is proverbially awkward and ungainly. The old proverb about all work and no play is true. A child that is kept at work and deprived of play grows dull and listless and old before his time. He needs the mental stimulus and exhilaration that comes from competition with his fellows in friendly sports. He should engage in games that bring into play unused muscles and that tax his lungs and endurance. He should satisfy his natural desire to match his powers against others of his age and size.

MORE VALUE OF PLAY ILLUSTRATED.

But physical exercise is only a part of the value of play. The mental, moral and social features are of great importance and should not be neglected. The mental phase has already been noticed. Its moral value is well illustrated by the following story told by Mr. Lee F. Hamner, Field Secretary of the Playground Association of America.

A boy was arrested for stealing apples. The judge of the juvenile court turned him over to the probation officer who took occasion as soon as they were alone to have a heart-to-heart talk with him. "Now Jack," she said, "I want you to tell me how you came to get into this trouble. Is it true that you like apples so very well, if you can't get them in any other way, you just have to steal them? Is it your love for apples that is the cause of all this?" Jack looked somewhat confused and surprised. He had never thought of it in that light before. Then hanging his head in embarrassment he said, "No, ma'am, but it is such fun to have them chase me." Mr. Hamner remarks, "What that boy wanted was a game, not apples, and the community is not looking out for its own welfare that does not provide him a means of having his game in a good wholesome way, instead of having it under conditions that are paving the way for greater offenses when he comes to be a man."

Boys of moral minds do not run into evil because of any love for doing wrong. They have a natural desire for adventure and because of lack of legitimate outlets they often get into scrapes that may lead to serious offenses. It is the business of parents and teachers to provide this legitimate outlet to their energies with amusements that will develop their powers and be an asset all their life.

This boundless energy and intense desire to be doing something outside of regular routine is the teacher's great opportunity and should not be neglected. To make the most of it much careful planning should be done and the boy's own taste and choice should have consideration. It is not so much what we think children ought to do and be as it is what nature prompts them to. Unless we are blessed with a fertile imagination and a good memory of our own childhood we are likely to see thru mature eyes and judge accordingly. Yet if we have the imagination and the memory this will be a great help as well as it will furnish the wisdom that is lacking to childhood. It may often be necessary to restrain, to plan and to direct. But a child should be allowed to think and to plan for himself as far as his capacity will permit. The teacher will need to modify, to offer suggestions and to place limitations but he should take his cue largely from what the child wishes to do and enjoys doing.

CLEAN POLITICS

The Republicans and Democrats of Hart County, Kentucky, have entered into an agreement to conduct a campaign in that county this fall in which no money, whiskey or other thing of value shall be used to promote the candidacy of any candidate of either ticket.

W. F. Nichols, chairman of the Republican committee of the county, first addressed a letter to C. R. Carden, chairman of the Democratic committee proposing that the Democratic candidates meet with the Republican candidates and sign an agreement that the campaign and election be conducted without such sordid influences as money and whiskey.

The Democrats came back, and not only accepted the proposition of the Republicans, but proposed that each of the candidates on both tickets be required to execute a bond of $2,000, with good and approved security, that he would not use either money or whiskey, and in addition he would offer a reward of $250 for any other candidate convicted of such an offense. In addition to all of this, the Democrats proposed that each candidate be required to take a solemn oath that he would not use money or whiskey, or that he would not subscribe to a campaign fund or promise anyone an office or other thing of value, and that he would not reimburse anyone for any work or labor or money used in the coming campaign and election.

The Republicans accepted the proposition, and now the candidates of both parties are going to have a joint meeting, at which all the documents will be sworn to and signed.

Unreasonable.

Yes, George, as you say, the conversation of a barber while cutting your hair is apt to be sheer nonsense; but what can you expect in the way of mature speech from a mere shaver?—Harper's Weekly.

SHEEP SCAB QUARANTINE

(From the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture.)

The whole sheep industry of Kentucky is in danger from the United States Government quarantine against Kentucky sheep which went into effect Monday of this week.

The order for the quarantine, provides that sheep shall be moved interstate from Kentucky only under the following conditions: Sheep that are diseased with scab and that have been dipped once in an approved dip under the supervision of an inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry within ten days before shipment may be shipped interstate to a recognized slaughtering center for immediate slaughter. If diseased sheep are to be shipped interstate for stocking or feeding purposes they shall be dipped twice within an interval of ten days. Other sheep may be moved interstate for feeding or stocking purposes after one dipping under Government supervision or they may be shipped interstate under quarantine restrictions for immediate slaughter without dipping.

Inspections and dippings under the regulations will be performed only at points where Federal inspectors are stationed. Louisville is at present the only place in the State having dipping facilities, but if proper yarding and dipping facilities should be installed at other points the Department of Agriculture would consider the advisability of establishing inspection at such places for the convenience of shippers.

There is no one who is affected more severely by this than the mountaineer, for while the roads remain as they are he must depend for raising ready money chiefly on the crops that can take themselves to market, such as cattle and other animals, and sheep form a large part of this class of crops. Also, the scab greatly injures the wool and lessens the crop, so that even if there is no desire to ship the sheep, their value at home is greatly lessened. In short, the scab hurts the mountaineer badly, and the mountaineer has got to do something about it if it does not want to suffer severely, and even have the Federal embargo placed against it.

The Fiscal Courts of different counties have a great deal of power in the matter, the most of the work must be done by the individual farmers. The Fiscal Courts can and should engage inspectors who will diagnose all cases of scab and see that proper remedies are applied. If the quarantine comes it will last till the farmers and the state do something, and stamp out the disease, and the loss and great penalties going with the quarantine can only be averted by acting at once. A little work now will save all this, and the work will have to be done sooner or later, or sheep raising will have to be stopped in the state.

There is no disease which can be stopped more easily or cheaply than scab in sheep, and there is none that does more damage. Many farmers know this and keep their flocks entirely free from it, resulting in a great saving of money to them. The cause and cure of the disease are fully understood, and any man that wants to can have a clean flock. If even a few men begin to do this the danger of quarantine will be averted.

The cause of a sheep scab is a little bug, about the size of a chigger, that is, as large as the period at the end of this sentence. It is grayish in color, and the only way to tell that it is alive is to put it in something dark colored and see whether it moves. This is the only way of knowing surely that a sheep has the scab, for other things may cause all the other symptoms.

The symptoms are very bad, when the disease gets a good start. First the sheep begins rubbing parts of its back and sides, then there appear little scabs which grow larger, looking at first like dandruff, but soon becoming running sores. The wool falls off, the sheep loses flesh, and finally, if not cured, dies. But by proper treatment the sheep may be saved, and the wool started to growing again. This treatment costs about five cents a sheep in flocks where there are a hundred sheep, it is more expensive to cure fewer sheep, but several farmers can always go in together and get the necessary number together.

To find out whether a sheep has the scab, find one of the little spots, like dandruff or a little scab on its skin, and either carefully pull a little wool out or clip close enough to the skin to draw a little blood. Lay the material on a piece of dark paper or cloth, and put it in a warm place. If there are scab mites there they will soon be seen crawling about. That means that the sheep has scab, and unless treated and cured will lose its wool and after a while, its life.

The proper treatment of scab is to dip the sheep in a liquid which will kill the mites. The dipping has to be repeated in ten or fourteen days, as the mites lay little eggs, which hatch out in about that time.

Two dippings a couple of weeks apart will cure any case of scab, and kill all the mites and eggs.

After the dipping, care should be taken not to put the sheep back into the same pasture or stable for a while. The sheep will have rubbed off some of the mites on the walls of the stable, or the trees and fence of the pasture, and if allowed to go back to the same places, will again get the mites on them, and the disease will get a new start. All it needs is to let the sheep get a few mites on them, and they will soon be covered. They can either get them from a sheep that has them or from the stable or pastures, trees and fences. So it is important after sheep have been cured, not to let them get to places where they can get the scab mites.

After a couple of months, or after the stables have been washed with some material to kill the mites, the sheep may be safely turned into them again. The mites will not live very long off from a sheep's body, and they do not live on any other animal.

Next week The Citizen will give more information about the treatment of sheep scab, and also full directions for making a dipping tank and instructions as to how to make the mixture that the sheep should be dipped in to cure the scab. The information is all taken from government publications on the subject, and is the best that can be obtained anywhere. If you have sheep, try the suggestions given above to see if they have scab, and then watch next weeks paper to learn how to cure it.

SURE ENOUGH.

It's too hot to work,
And too hot to play;
It's too hot to go,
And too hot to stay.

It's too hot to die,
And too hot to live;
Too hot to receive,
And too hot to give.

It's too hot to sell,
And too hot to buy;
It's too hot to ride,
And too hot to fly.

It's too hot to weep,
And too hot to wish;
But just about right
To lay off and fish.

Dignity of British Courts.

Judge Bacon, addressing a solicitor at the close of a case in the White-chapel county court recently said: "I do not wish to suggest any improvement in the dress or attire of solicitors, but I really do not think it is proper for a black gown to be on such a light coat." The solicitor bowed his acknowledgment to the judge, whose objection was well founded on many judicial precedents.—Law Journal.

Rainy Day Thoughts.

"When I used to live in the west," said the New York woman, "there seemed to be a good excuse for the rain. Whenever it rained we said: 'How fine it will be for the crops,' and stayed indoors gladly, but here in New York there's no earthly excuse for its raining day after day, and the shops so full of beautiful things we would like to buy."

Here's Candor.

"I like to be complimented once in a while and I enjoy being flattered," says the editor of the Howard Courier, "but there's one old girl around here making me mighty tired by claiming me as one of her old beaux."—Atlanta Constitution.

Worth Choosing.

"In choosing his men," said the Sabbath-school superintendent, "Gideon did not select those who laid aside their arms and threw themselves down to drink. He took those who watched with one eye and drank with the other."

What Happened to Alice.

"What became of Alice Green who came from Potomac, Pa., to New York to make her mark in the world?" asked some visitors at an art school. "She was going to do such wonders in New York." "I think," answered a pupil, who had known Alice Green, "that she walked in front of a surface car she thought was going the other way."

A Trifle Uncertain.

Little Jean's parents were enthusiastic bridge-players, and Jean was more or less familiar with the sight of cards. At Sunday school one day the teacher had been giving a talk on David. Finally she held up a little colored print of David dressed in royal robes, and asked: "What child can tell me who this is?" Out of the silence pined little Jean's voice: "I think it's a king, but it may be a jack!"

Prepared for Death.

At the funeral recently of William Lakla, aged 90, in Stapenhill churchyard, Burton-on-Trent, England, it was found that he had bought his vault 30 years ago, and since then had personally bricked in his wife and daughter and other members of the family. He had lived within a stone's throw of the grave over 80 years.

Our Friends.

Women are more loyal friends, especially to men of genius, than are men to each other. That is one reason, perhaps, why the man of genius usually surrounds himself with petticoats, rather than with admirers of the sterner sex. He wishes to be praised when living as well as when dead.—London Sketch.

Do a Thing and Don't Talk.

Just do a thing, and don't talk about it. This is the great secret of success in all enterprises. Talk means discussion; discussion means irritation; irritation means opposition, and opposition means hindrance always, whether you are right or wrong.—Barab Grand.

An Age of Kindness.

The progress of human sensibility is amazing; we give soldiers better food and lighter accoutrements, and less work to everyone. The regime in prisons is milder; charity is ever increasing, and our children have less to do and longer holidays.

Uncle Bentley and the Roosters

By Hayden Carruth

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

The burden of Uncle Bentley has always rested heavily on our town. Having not a shadow of business to attend to he has made other people's business his own, and looked after it in season and out—especially out. If there is a thing which nobody wants done, to this Uncle Bentley applies his busy hand.

One warm summer Sunday we were all at church. Our pastor had taken the passage on turning the other cheek, or one akla to it, for his text, and was preaching on peace and quiet and non-resistance. He soon had us in a devout mood which must have been beautiful to see and encouraging to the good man.

Of course, Uncle Bentley was there—he always was, and forever in a front pew, with his neck craned up looking backward to see if there was anything that didn't need doing which he could do. He always tinkered with the fires in the winter and fussed with the windows in the summer, and did his worst with each. His strongest church point was ushering. Not content to usher the stranger within our gates, he would usher all of us, and always thrust us into pews with just the people we didn't want to sit with. If you failed to follow him when he took you in tow, he would stop and look back reproachfully, describing mighty ladrawing curves with his arm; and if you pretended not to see him, he would give a low whistle to attract your attention, the arm working right along, like a Holland wind-mill.

On this particular warm summer Sunday Uncle Bentley was in place wearing his long, full-skirted coat, a queer, dark, hottle-green, purplish blue. He had ushered to his own exceeding joy, and got two men in one pew, and given them a single hymn-book, who wouldn't on week-days speak to each other. I ought to mention that we had long before made a ver of Uncle Bentley. To unchallenged way was to do the wrong thing.

The minister was floating along smoothly on the subject of peace when Uncle Bentley was observed to throw up his head. He had heard a sound outside. It was really nothing but one of Deacon Plummer's young roosters crowing. The deacon lived near, and vocal offerings from his poultry were frequent and had ceased to interest anyone except Uncle Bentley. Then in the pauses between the preacher's periods we heard the flapping of wings, with sudden stoppages and startings. Those unregenerate fowls, unable to understand the good man's words, were fighting. Even this didn't interest us—we were committed to peace. But Uncle Bentley shot up like a jack-in-a-box and catered down the aisle. Of course, his notion was that the roosters were disturbing the services and that it was his duty to go out and stop them. We heard vigorous "Shoo!" and "Take that!" and "Consign 'em!" and then Uncle Bentley came back looking very important, and as he stalked up the aisle he glanced around and nodded his head, saying as clearly as words: "There, where would you be without me?" Another defiant crow floated in at the window.

The next moment the rushing and heating of wings began again, and down the aisle went Uncle Bentley, the long tails of that coat fairly floating like a cloud behind him. There was further uproar outside, and Uncle Bentley was back in his place, this time turning around and whispering hoarsely: "I fixed 'em!" But such was not the case, for twice more the very same thing was repeated. The last time Uncle Bentley came back he wore a calm, smug expression, as who should say: "Now I have fixed 'em!" We should have liked it better if the roosters had fixed Uncle Bentley. But nobody paid much attention except Deacon Plummer. The thought occurred to him that perhaps Uncle Bentley had killed the fowls. But he hadn't.

However, there was no more disturbance without, and after a time the sermon closed. There was some sort of a special collection to be taken up. Of course, Uncle Bentley always insisted on taking up all the collections. He hopped up on this occasion and seized the plate with more than usual vigor. His struggles with the roosters had evidently stimulated him. He soon made the rounds and approached the table in front of the pulpit to deposit his harvest. As he did so we saw to our horror that the long tails of that ridiculous coat were violently agitated. A sickening suspicion came over us. The next moment one of those belligerent young roosters thrust a head out of either of those coat-tail pockets. One uttered a raucous crow, the other made a vicious dah. Uncle Bentley dropped the plate with a scattering of coin, seized a coat skirt in each hand and drew it front. This dumped both fowls out on the floor, where they went at it hammer and tongs. What happened after this is a blur in most of our memories. All that is certain is that there was an uproar in the congregation, especially the younger portion; that the deacon began making unsuccessful dives for his poultry; that the organist struck up "Onward, Christian Soldier," and that the minister waved us away without a benediction amid loud shouts of "Shoo!" "I wanny!" and "Drat the peaky critters!" from your Uncle Bentley.

Did it serve to subdue Uncle Bentley? Not in the least; he survived to do worse things.

THAW WILL APPEAL

MOTHER'S WEALTH WILL BACK SLAYER IN NEW FIGHT FOR LIBERTY.

GOES BACK TO MATTEAWAN

Justice Mills Declares Stanford White's Murderer Is Still Insane—Declares Wife's Story False—Believes Prisoner Whipped Girls.

White Plains, N. Y.—Backed by his mother's great wealth, Harry K. Thaw, who was taken back to the Matteawan insane asylum under the decision rendered Thursday by Justice Mills, will soon begin another fight for his liberty, this time in the court of appeals.

Justice Mills in dismissing the habeas corpus declined "the release of the petitioner would be dangerous to the public peace and safety."

There is no crumb of comfort for Thaw in the 7,000-word opinion handed down by Justice Mills. All the contentions of his old adversary, District Attorney Jerome are supported, and it is declared that Thaw is still insane, still suffering from persistent delusions, and still as much a paranoiac as on the day he shot Stanford White.

Thaw, waiting in the White Plains jail, at the rear of the courthouse, where the decision was filed, received the news with an outward calmness which appeared, however, more forced than real.

The members of his family and his attorney seemed stunned by the thoroughness of their defeat. Thaw declined to give out any extended statement, contenting himself with the assertion that he was not disheartened and would at once continue his fight for liberty.

"My next effort," he said, "will be centered upon the court of appeals, through which I expect to secure a hearing before a jury in my effort to have my commitment to Matteawan set aside."

Justice Mills in his opinion reaches these three formal conclusions:

That Thaw was insane when he killed White.

That he has not yet recovered.

That public peace and safety would be endangered by setting him at large.

He upholds District Attorney Jerome's contentions that Thaw still cherishes delusions regarding the practices of Stanford White and his associates.

Justice Mills characterizes Evelyn Thaw's tale of the Madison Square tower room, and similar stories about White told at the sanity hearing, as "wild and grossly improbable, evidently to any normal mind grossly exaggerated."

He asserts his belief in the testimony of Susan Merrill regarding Thaw's alleged whipping of girls, and points out the contrast between Thaw's chivalrous attitude as a protector of young American womanhood, and his private life.

Justice Mills expressed deep sympathy for Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, the prisoner's mother, and her exposition of the "horrors of Matteawan" on the stand evidently prompted his recommendation that Thaw be allowed greater privileges at that institution. At the same time he gently chided Mrs. Thaw for her censure of District Attorney Jerome, of whom he said: "I find no evidence of any heartlessness or undue zeal on his part."

Not the least significant sentence in Justice Mills' decision, in the opinion of lawyers here, is one which declares that Thaw's delusions had become fixed and established before the time of his marriage.

It is pointed out that this sentence may, if desired, prove grounds for proceedings by Mrs. Evelyn Thaw for the annulment of her marriage.

HAS "POSTAL CARDOMANIA"

Cincinnati Man Gives This as Reason for Slapping Wife and Court Releases Him.

Cincinnati.—William Schenck of Elwood place offered a novel excuse for slapping his wife when he faced Judge Hoffman in the police court Wednesday. He claimed that he was a victim of "postal cardomania," and charged his wife with sending them. He presented several cards to the court.

On one was written, "All in and down and out;" another showed a handsome young woman with outstretched arms, yawning. Underneath the picture was printed the words, "I do not care if he never comes back." Another had written on it, "Come in, the water is fine."

The wife claimed that Schenck had slapped and then punched her in the face while he was talking with her Sunday night. He was released.

AMERICA TO WARN JAPAN

UNCLE SAM TO CALL HALT IF CHINA'S DOORS CLOSE.

Crisis Seems to Be Near—European Powers Also Watching Actions of Mikado's Government.

Washington.—The United States will call Japan to task if any attempt is made to close the doors of China to the trade of this country. Such a step has been definitely decided upon and Japan knows it.

The "open door" was insisted upon by the United States ten years ago, when Russia was dominant in China, and when Japan was clamoring for trade. The action of the United States at that time was highly pleasing to Japan, and contributed to the success of the Japanese in expelling Russia, although that was far from the purpose of the Washington government.

Because the United States insisted on the "open door" at that time the Japanese government regarded it as an act of friendship to Tokyo and not a firm and irrevocable stroke of American policy. Now Japan is to learn that the American contention for the "open door" in China was not directed at Russia, but at all powers that attempt to dominate China to the exclusion of United States commerce.

Russia to-day is occupying much the same position that Japan did ten years ago, when Secretary Hay insisted on the "open door."

The Bear is watching Japan's conduct very closely for any breach in Manchuria that would justify protest. Not only Russia is watching Japan's conduct, but so are Germany, France, Holland, Italy and Austria, throughout continental Europe, as well as in the United States, to see whether Japan in any way violates the principles contended for by the powers, and for this reason her actions will be watched closely by them. Should such probability become evident, the time will be ripe for some very pertinent questions directed to the Japanese government as to her motives and intentions.

The government is considering the appointment to this office of Chao Erh-luan, formerly governor of Mukden.

Miss Phillips enjoyed almost a national reputation by reason of her work at Christmas time among the poor children. For weeks prior to Christmas of each year she collected funds which she expended for toys and clothing for the needy and on Christmas eve she visited the homes of the children in a big automobile.

Two years ago, at her request, all the letters written by children and mailed to Santa Claus were delivered to her and the requests of the children, as far as possible, were complied with.

30 DEAD, 82 INJURED

BY EARTHQUAKE IN CENTRAL JAPAN—WIDE AREA AFFECTED.

SHOCK RAZES 362 BUILDINGS

Thousands of Others Badly Damaged—River Banks Break and Towns Inundated—Mountain Formation Changed.

Tokyo.—Reports received Sunday concerning the earthquake in Central Japan Saturday afternoon show that there were a number of fatalities, and that great damage was done property. The dead at present is said to be 30, though it is feared that the fatalities will be greatly increased when the outlying districts are heard from. The number of persons injured is 82. Thus far 362 buildings, including many temples, are reported to have been destroyed and more than one thousand others badly damaged.

The shock occurred at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and affected a wide area in the Shiga and Gifu prefectures. The town of Oosaka, in Gifu, suffered terribly. The banks of the Hida river there broke and the surrounding country was inundated. The people of the district fled to high ground and remained in the open all night. Intermittent shocks were felt throughout Saturday night and early Sunday morning.

The mountain Ibuki, a short distance west of Gifu, emitted smoke in the early stages of the earthquake and then collapsed with a tremendous roar. The formation of the mountain was completely changed.

Slight damage was done at Nagoya, to the southward of Gifu, and neighboring villages.

Asphyxiated Herself and Three Children in a Bathroom—She Was Hopelessly Ill.

Chicago.—Mrs. Marie Handzel, Sunday, committed suicide and at the same time asphyxiated her three boys. She had carefully bathed and dressed her three children—two 4 years old and the other two 2 years old—and carried them into the bathroom, where she had closed the door and turned on the gas.

Mrs. Handzel had been ill for some time and apparently was able to get no relief. She leaves four other children, ranging in age from 5 to 16.

Lake Disappears During Night.

La Crosse, Wis.—Beautiful Lake Como at Hekah, Minn., just across the state line, a resort much patronized by southern tourists, disappeared during the night. When the residents of the village arose Sunday morning they were amazed to see nothing but a bed of shifting sand covered with drying fish. A dam 300 feet long at the foot of the lake went out with a roar early Sunday morning, but this fails to account for the utter disappearance of the lake.

Negro Lynched.

Monroe, La.—News was received here Sunday of the lynching of a negro near Boas, in Moorehouse parish. The negro was hanged from a tree by the roadside, near his home, and his body riddled with bullets. Considerable ill feeling is said to have been entertained against him because he brought suit against a white resident of that community who had killed a cow belonging to the negro.

Blew His Head Off With Dynamite.

Peoria, Ill.—Charles P. Jones, aged 73, whose home is at Hanna City, Ill., blew his head off with a dynamite cartridge in a ravine near the Peoria State Hospital for the Insane. The blast severed his head from the body as if done by a guillotine, and while nothing could be found of the head, the body was in good shape. Jones was admitted to the asylum August 3 on his own request.

DECREASE IN DRINKING HABIT

Better Living Conditions and Healthier Amusements Tend to Lessen Drunkenness.

It is only proper and right that the public's attention should be called frequently to the evils of intemperance. Few of us menhwhile realize what immense strides humanity has made in the course of the centuries toward temperance, says I. K. Friedmann in the Chicago Daily News.

As late as 1736, we are told by Porter in his "Progress of the Nation," the favor in which intoxicating drinks were held by the people had reached such a point as to occasion continued debates in parliament and to call for remedies of a very stringent character. It was then the practice of some keepers of liquor shops to entice customers with a notice to the following effect, printed on a board outside the tipping house: "You may get drunk for a penny, dead drunk for two pence, and have clean straw for nothing." The mere difference in public opinion in our own day and in the age which would tolerate such a vicious appeal to the lowest of instincts perhaps is its own best comment.

When the legislators of that time, thinking to correct the abuse by increasing the price of spirituous liquors, proposed a duty of 20 shillings ($4.80) a gallon, the act led to riot and violence on the part of the populace. The secret sale of gin went on in defiance of the law. Says the historian: "The demand for penalties the offenders were unable to pay filled the prisons and by removing every restraint plunged them into courses more audaciously criminal."

In March, 1738, a proclamation was issued to enforce the gin act, to protect the officers of justice in their efforts to that end and threatening offenders with punishment. Within less than two years from its passage 12,000 persons had been subjected to fines. The harsh measures failed utterly, as any measure, unsupported by public feeling, always must fail.

"Nor were those habits of drunkenness," Porter again remarks, "confined to the laboring classes. What would now be called drinking to excess was then so much the custom in every circle that it was as uncommon for any party to separate while any member of it remained sober as it is now for one in such a party to degrade himself through intoxication. In those days it rarely happened that men holding the rank and otherwise bearing the character of gentlemen rose from the table of a dining party in condition to enter the society of females, and thus all were debauched from the sweetest hours of rational enjoyment which now spring from social intercourse." The contemporary novels verify these words.

With reference to this same period another authority tells us: "No loss of character was incurred by habitual excess. Men in the position of gentlemen congratulated each other upon the number of bottles emptied; and it would have been considered a very frivolous objection to a citizen who aspired to the dignity of alderman or mayor that he was a habitual drunkard."

If one seeks an explanation for the great and most satisfactory decrease in drunkenness which has come one finds it not in drastic laws or compulsory prohibition, but in the growth of intelligence among the people, in an enlightened public opinion, in the spread of education, refinement and sane living consequent thereupon. Better living conditions, better wages and shorter hours and the diversion of the people from grosser and crueler forms of sport to healthful amusements have been tremendous factors in the movement. Nor is it to be doubted that these same beneficent forces, increasing in strength as humanity increases in age and experience, will lead to a greater and greater decrease in the drinking habit; for of all methods of abolishing an evil that of pointing out its bad effects to those who indulge in it has proved the best and the most lasting.

Gloom in Jersey.

There is gloom among the saloon keepers of New Jersey. It was brought by an unkind lawmaker, who, at the last session of the legislature, obtained the passage of an act which prohibits the use of signs or emblems on the outside of saloons. And, just to rub it in, the lawmaker made the act go into effect on the Fourth of July. The big gilt signs which now adorn the outside of drinking places have been a heavy expense for the brewers, and it is estimated that the new law will save them about $200,000 annually.—Exchange.

No-License Gain in New York.

Yates county is the first county in the State of New York to vote out the saloon, though for two years only the county seat held out against the prevailing sentiment. The result of this election, which was a notable victory for the temperance forces, will not go into effect till the coming October. It is believed that this success will instigate the temperance people throughout the state to renewed efforts which will result in further victories during the coming year.

AUTOGRAPH GHOSTS OF FAMOUS PEOPLE

MARIE ERMINIE RIVERA

LADY DUFF-GORDON

THE autograph book has a far more amusing and just now than the mere collecting of ordinary signatures of extraordinary folk, and the newest thing in this hobby necessitates the possession of a "ghost-book" to hold the signatures which portray the "ghosts" of the eminent ones.

Just finished a brilliant first season in America, said that she could see in her ghost the shades of the late empress dowager of China. That fancy may have occurred to her because when she made her ghost the news of the death of the Chinese empress had just been received.

George Bernard Shaw hasn't time for ghosts or interviews or writer folk at all, he says, yet this most inconsistent of men generally gives his interview and sees the writer person, and here we have his ghost. Mr. Shaw generally makes it as uncomfortable as possible for the interviewer before allowing him to be admitted, but after that the genial blue-eyed Irishman is irresistible and one readily forgives him anything that has seemed rude. The writer sent a note asking for an interview with Mr. Shaw in his chambers just off the Embankment in London last summer and in response Mr. Shaw characteristically wrote:

My Dear Miss —: I will have ten minutes' rest to-morrow some time between 11 and 12:30. If you catch me during the ten minutes I will see you. If you stay longer I will throw you out of the window.

GEORGE B. S.

The writer went at a quarter to twelve and Mr. Shaw talked and talked and talked until person will often show an apparent wide difference in conformation, owing to the shape of the pen, the flow of the ink and the amount of pressure used, a more careful scrutiny will make it clear that the chief characteristics hold throughout. The ghost is true to its type.

Who, then, will interpret and reveal the true meaning of our ghost autographs? Here is a new field for investigation and amusement.

With the advent of the ghost book we have a new twist to an old, old fad. Travelers in central Europe as early as the fourteenth century used to carry their "Book of Friends," an octavo volume in which names and sentiments were inscribed. On their return home they could show an interesting record of the famous personages they had met. These are the first autograph albums of which we hear, but the passion for collecting manuscripts and autographs is as old as the history of cultured society and is not without its romantic side. One of the Ptolemies once paid the starving Athenians in wheat for the privilege of copying some treasured manuscripts of the immortal Greek dramatists. The wretch kept the originals and returned the copies. If it had been the ghost signatures of Euripides and Sophocles that the unscrupulous ruler was after he would not have found it easy to perpetrate so heartless a trick.

MONEY THAT GOES ABROAD

Europe is a lovely place; the grave of Shakespeare is a noble sight and it's worth money to see the hillsides that produce the wine that made the Rhine famous. But this year it was Broadway, Bath Beach, Kokomo or Klamazoo for a large number of worthy American citizens whose custom it has been to spend the sultry months across the water.

It's the old story of Blaklava over again—only worse. Some millions have blundered. Times are twisted up in a hard knot and we are just beginning to get the kinks out. Nobody knows what is going to be the outcome of the new tariff law. The indications are good for a poor wheat crop. Panama hats and overcoats are selling side by side in the open market.

In short, there is no time like the present for stying at home and attending to business. In these crucial circumstances 200,000 persons have consented to make the sacrifice. At any rate, such are the present indications.

This means something to the rest of the country. Paying to see Europe is our annual blood-letting operation. Millions upon millions are taken out of our national circulation. We work hard during the winter, either at earning money or at getting it from those who have earned it, then hustle across the water to fatten up the Swiss guides and the hotel keepers. That is, about 1,200,000 of us do. The other 78,800,000 do their traveling in their sleep, so they can be back next morning in time for work.

The rich American going abroad counts only one on the passenger list, but he must be carefully considered in any estimate.

He spreads out the chart upon his desk. An exceedingly anxious-to-please agent of the steamship company is at his side. Here is something up near the bow that is just right—so the steamship man says. "Not for a minute," says the man who has the last say. It is too far up in front. The motion of the boat would put him out of business the first day. What else?

Oh, an exquisite suite of midships. It's great. The Countess de Spitzbergen never takes anything else when she is going to or coming from America. Beautiful parlor, mahogany finish. Bedroom in ivory. Bathroom in baby blue. Maid's quarters. And the rate for two adults and one servant is only $1,700.

Will the gentleman take it?

Indeed he will not. The Countess de Spitzbergen may travel in the bold if she likes, but no baby blue or mahogany can lure him to a point over the engines. Why, didn't he come over once in a suite thus located? Didn't the incessant coughing, wheezing, trembling and sneezing of the machinery nearly drive him wild? Not a wink of sleep from the time he went aboard until he got home. Friends thought he had been sick when he showed himself in the street.

Oh, very well. Here's an equally beautiful suite far removed from the engines—back toward the stern. Occupants of these apartments often call for the captain to ask what makes the boat go, because they can hear no noise nor feel any vibration. Highly recommended by the best physicians to nervous patients. Price, the same.

Did any one ever hear of such stupidity? Here our patient multi-millionaire has explained in detail that he cannot travel at the bow of a ship because the motion is too great and the agent has shown him a suite near the stern. What's the difference between the bow and the stern, anyway? Isn't each end balanced in the middle where it will go up and down like the end of a walking-beam? Well, a steamship man who doesn't know any more than that can go back home. Mr. Multi-Millionaire will travel by some line that at least employs persons of intelligence.

Louisville, Ky.—Planning two red roses to a farewell note which she dispatched to her daughter, in an infirmary, Mrs. May Spindle, wife of Thaddeus W. Spindle, law partner of Aaron Kohn, ended life by shooting herself in the mouth with a revolver. No tragedy in all the list of suicides in several years has so stirred Louisville. The maddening pain of frequent headaches and the effects of morphine and chloroform, which her physicians decline she took constantly, are believed to have been the cause of her deed.

QUARANTINE AGAINST SHEEP.

Message from Secretary of State Bruner Says It Will Not Take Effect at Once.

C.: "We win." This message is taken to mean that there would be no quarantine against sheep until at least September 1, and that the purpose of the committee in calling upon Secretary Wilson has been accomplished.

These little books are becoming very popular both in London and in New York. They have an advantage over the ordinary autograph album, because the collecting of signatures has been so overdone that many of the "great ones" have had rubber facsimiles made of their very best autographs—not the kind that appears on their checks—and instead of taking time to respond whenever a stamped and addressed envelope is facsimiled, all they do is to pass the letter, request and envelope over to their secretary—or perhaps it never gets beyond the secretary at all—and the autograph is stamped on in such a manner that it serves the purpose well and saves Mr. Author, Mr. Actor or Mr. Singer a lot of time and trouble.

But a request for a name in one's ghost book has a certain novelty about it and there is, too, considerable curiosity to see just what sort of a ghost one's name will make, so that nearly everyone will take the trouble to picture his ghost for you.

In making the collection for a ghost book, partially reproduced here, many well-known men and women were asked for ghosts. President and Mrs. Taft were immensely amused at the idea and both took the keenest interest in seeing how their ghosts would turn out. The big statesman adjusted his glasses, folded with the utmost precision the paper on which he was to inscribe his ghost, looked around for a stub pen, which, unfortunately, he could not find on his desk in the Hot Springs bungalow and then he wrote his name and hastily folded back the paper.

"Cannot say that for such a big man as I am in the flesh my ghost cuts such a wide swath," he laughingly remarked as he held the paper up for Mrs. Taft to view. "But anyhow, the smaller one's ghost the better—perhaps," he added.

"Mrs. Taft was more pleased with her ghost than she was with that of her husband. 'You are more important just now, but my ghost is a far more artistic creature than yours and really more spirituelle,' she laughed.

It will be noticed that a part of Mrs. Taft's ghost bears a remarkable resemblance to a Masonic emblem.

Miss Mary Garden practiced several times on her ghost before she would allow the final one to appear in the writer's ghost book.

"Ghosts, like everything else, improve by practice, and I look upon my final ghost as a worthy effort," laughed Miss Garden. "In fact, I see the urn above from which my spook must have hopped out," she said, and sure enough, if one will look at the prima donna's ghost it will be found quite true.

Miss Geraldine Farrar was enchanted with her ghost, which she said looked like a veritable butterfly. "How splendid to be so picturesque a ghost!" Miss Farrar commented.

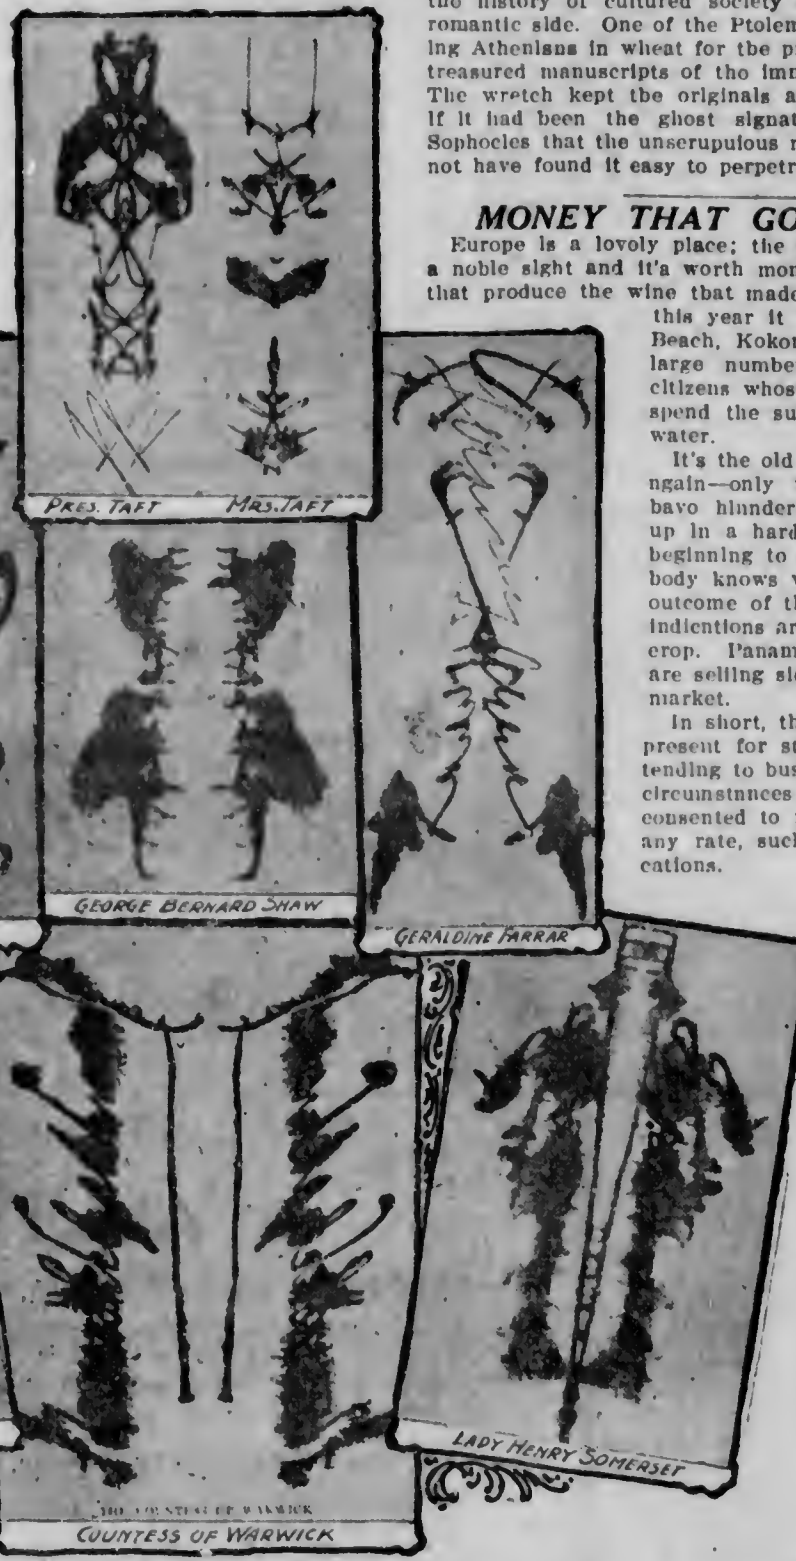

Miss Emma C. Thursty has one of the most remarkable ghosts of all, and for beauty and symmetry it is quite as pleasing as a wrought-iron work design or a Japanese brass candlestick. "I prefer to think of it as something that was designed by the shades of some Japanese artist, which idea I absorbed when I visited some of the great temples in Japan," said Miss Thursty.

Lady Warwick says she doesn't believe in ghosts at all, but she was very much impressed by the appearance of her titled name when her ghost became a reality. "I think I shall design a book plate out of it. That wouldn't be a bad idea, would it?" the countess added as she viewed the strong, bold writing that formed her signature.

Lady Coomo Duff-Gordon was enchanted with her ghost and ghost-collecting has become such a fad with her that she has purchased a dozen of the little volumes for her friends. "I put my ghost in each one and I suppose I must be a woman of a number of selves or else there are a number of warring ghosts in my ancestry, for each one of my signatures produced a ghost so totally different from the others that one would scarcely believe that they came from the same name and handwriting. But I am rather pleased with the idea, for what is more prosaic than lack of variety? I have made my fortune by original and diverse designs in the making of frocks," said the titled dressmaker, "so why shouldn't my ghost signature portray that characteristic?"

When Mrs. Ellnor Glyn, author of "Three Weeks," had made her ghost she thought that it bore some resemblance to a tiger and eagerly pointed out its claws. "The tiger is essentially one of my transmutations, or shall I say manifestations?" remarked Mrs. Glyn. "Hence my tiger ghost. Paul would be pleased with that, wouldn't he?" she added with a smile.

Emmy Destinn, the gifted Bohemian prima donna of the Royal opera house, Berlin, who has nearly one o'clock and not a word was said about the window or the playwright's strong right arm!

For a man of his husky threats Mr. Shaw has a very mild and diminutive-looking ghost.

Marie Erminie Rivera has a ghost that might be of Oriental origin, for it resembles an antique and elaborately carved vase of Chinese design more than anything else. "Perhaps it is meant for the urn that contains my shades," the novelist laughingly remarked.

Of course one may just care to have the ghosts of one's friends and not particularly those of people celebrated in the art, literary or political worlds, and then it will be a simple matter to fill up one's ghost book, for the making of ghosts will be found to be quite a novelty at a tea or other social affair, and taken along with one's hand luggage on an ocean voyage a ghost-book will prove a source of endless amusement, while it will make a lasting souvenir of the trip. The ghost book itself is a small affair that can be gotten in the pocket of an overcoat or can be carried easily in a muff or big handbag, so that one can always take it along without any trouble.

When you ask for a ghost signature you prepare the page for the writing by folding it and the person whose ghost you are after writes directly on the line of the fold. A stub pen which holds a large amount of ink is best for this purpose, as the size and mystery of the ghost depend largely upon the ink. After the name is written the page is folded together again without blotting and lo, the ghost appears. Try it and see!

It is not necessary to have a book. One can have the signatures written on separate sheets of paper and collect them, but care must be taken to use soft paper that will absorb the ink readily. These separate sheets can then be pasted into a scrap-book, but the little ghost book itself will be found more convenient. At the top of a page in the ghost book is a small dotted line for the date and below appears another line for the writing of the name after the ghost is made, so that after all in a ghost book one gets a genuine autograph as well as the spook signature.

While several ghost signatures of the same
